Making the management of MGD as easy as 1-2-3!

Join us on Wednesday 19 July at 12 noon UK (BST) for a webinar with Professor Jennifer Craig.

Meibomian gland dysfunction (MGD) affects approximately one-third of the adult population and is increasingly prevalent among children and is widely recognized as a primary cause of dry eye disease.

This presentation will describe the pathophysiology, clinical presentation, risk factors, and diagnostic features of MGD and will provide an overview of the scientific evidence supporting various contemporary therapeutic strategies for managing dry eye resulting from meibomian gland dysfunction. The strategies include both at-home measures and in-office therapies.

By adopting a simple and practical stepwise approach, eye care practitioners can effectively manage affected patients, focusing on optimizing lid margin status, promoting meibum outflow, and improving the quality of the tear film lipid layer.

Members can watch live online via Zoom, and the event will be live streamed to our Facebook page for students and eye care practitioners to tune into.
